The Emotionally Intelligent Leader - Quick reference

Leader course | Trainer: Maya Thompson

The key ideas

- Leaders set the weather: Your mood spreads through the team

- Reading the climate of a team: Listen to what is not being said

- Shaping the climate on purpose: Decide the tone you want

- Leading under pressure: Pressure travels downward

- Making it safe to speak up: Thank people who bring bad news

- Growing emotional intelligence in your managers: Coach in one to ones, not memos

- Your own development as a leader: Ask for honest feedback

- Your next steps: Choose one climate behaviour to model

Words to know

Team climate: The shared feeling in a team that shapes how safe and energised people are at work.

Pulse question: A short, frequent question used to read how the team is feeling.

Coaching: Helping someone build their own awareness and skill through questions and feedback.

Modelling: Showing through your own behaviour the standard you expect from others.

Outcomes

- Read and shape team climate deliberately

- Model calm under organisational pressure

- Coach managers to grow their own EI
