Team Trust Reset - Quick reference

Practitioner course | Trainer: Daniel Okafor

The key ideas

- What trust looks like in practice: Trust shows up in small behaviours

- Psychological safety: The belief that you can speak up safely

- Signs that trust has dropped: Meetings with little discussion

- Writing a team charter: Agree how you will work together

- Running the session: Start with what works well already

- Working through team tensions: Name the tension without blaming

- The monthly team health check: Three questions: trust, clarity, energy

- Your next steps: Schedule your charter session

Words to know

Psychological safety: The shared belief that you can speak up, ask or admit a mistake without being embarrassed or punished.

Team charter: A short agreement on how the team will work together, made by the team and reviewed regularly.

Team health check: A short regular survey of trust, clarity and energy, followed by one action.

Tension: A difference in views or needs that, if unspoken, affects how the team works.

Outcomes

- Run a team charter session

- Name and work through team tensions

- Set up a monthly team health check